

THEIR OWN FIREMEN.

Tenants Put Out an Incendiary Fire in East 106th Street.

Pile of Shavings and Hall Carpet Soaked with Turpentine.

Through All the Excitement Grocer Drevies Slept Calmly.

A dastardly effort was made to burn the five-story brick apartment house 172 East One Hundred and Sixth street at 2 o'clock this morning.

Shavings, saturated with turpentine, were put in a carpeted hallway, the carpet was soaked and the stairs set afire.

The effort would certainly have been successful and would have doubtless resulted in loss of life to many of the tenants in the place had it not been for the quickness of Miss Mary Grace, who lives on the top floor with her parents.

There had been an exhibition of fireworks in front of the house, following the chowder party of a political club. The girls and the merry makings of members of the club had lasted far into the night, and kept everybody awake. The fire started just one more glance at the bonfire, and started into the hall to go downstairs. Then it was that she discovered that the house was on fire. The hall was filled with smoke, and there was a strong odor of turpentine. Running back up her mother, she called out: "Don't get frightened, mother," she cried. "I believe the house is on fire. Please don't get frightened."

Her words and excited manner acted on Mrs. Grace like an electric shock. She sprang from her bed with a will, and in another minute every tenant in the house had rushed out into the hall.

The fire didn't make much headway, and it didn't take long to understand what was burning. On the third floor, the front hall of the house, just in to angle where two doors meet to lead to the apartments on either side, a pile of shavings was lying in its way up side of the wall. It came from a heap of shavings that had evidently only a few minutes before been thrown down on the heavy carpet and lighted.

Among the very first who got near the fire was Edward Roderiques, the janitor of the house, who has rooms on the fourth floor. He took in the situation at a glance, and his coolness availed him.

"It's nothing," he shouted, "get water." With these and a few more reassuring words, Roderiques established a line of men and buckets of water to hand. It was an odd sight, for most of the people had taken time to the work for them, and there they stood, silent and active, while the flames, which by this time had caught upon the shavings, cracked and gave light for their own destruction.

When the janitor saw that things were progressing smoothly, he ran out to turn in an alarm. As he dashed out the front door, he ran directly into the arms of Policeman Thomas Purdie. The officer thought the man was a burglar and clutched him firmly.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

Roderiques was excited now that the first moments of danger were past. He stammered:

"You set the house on fire!" exclaimed the policeman.

"No, not me—somebody!"

The flames had been extinguished and all the people were to make an examination. He found that both doors had been badly burned. The heap of shavings had not all been afire, and what remained was soaked with the turpentine. The carpet had been saturated for ten minutes about the door. It looked as though some one had dumped the shavings onto the floor and poured the turpentine over them. No one had heard any one come in or go out. Downstairs on the lower floor, there was a lot of tobacco, as though a pipe had been filled and some of the tobacco spilled.

The policeman thought that whoever the firebug was he had lit a pipe downstairs, so that the sound of striking the match would not be heard, then he had dumped the pipe on the saturated shavings.

There is no clue as to the firebug. The facts on the west side of the hall where the fire occurred in vacant. The janitor tells of how a month ago a tall man came to the door. There was a great deal of complaint from the other tenants when it was known that he was about to move in. So Mrs. Oppenheimer, of 157 East One Hundred and Fifth street, the owner of the house, gave back the deposit he had made. The Italian was very angry, and he did not leave his keys. During all the excitement in the house store on the first floor, and lives in the house who did not leave his keys. This morning he said that he had heard all the noise, it had disturbed him a good deal and kept him awake.

"What was it all about, anyway?" he asked.

"Oh, I thought it was only a burglar that was robbing the place," said the janitor. The fire marshal will make a thorough investigation.

THE CAT HELD THE FORT.

A Barber Shop Badly Damaged by a Crazy Feline.

Henry Kollet, who has a barber shop on Ninth avenue, near Sixteenth street, suffered considerable from the antics of a huge black cat, which ran into his shop last Wednesday. About 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon a truck driver kicked a pasteboard box into the air. A black cat jumped from the box and ran into Kollet's shop.

In its mad rush about the shop, the cat knocked mirrors and cup racks from the wall and broke them. Bay and cologne bottles were smashed, and the customers lost no time in getting out.

From the shop the cat retired to a sleeping room in the rear of the shop and there held the fort until yesterday morning, when it was shot.
